ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

*Orringh and Liesje (Elizabeth) Mabee Stone played a key role in creating the community of Brighton, New York, setting the stage for the emergence of the City of Rochester, New York. Their farmhouse and grounds were purchased in 1956 by the Society for the Preservation of Landmarks in Western New York. The Landmark Society restored it and placed it on their tour of historic Rochester homes.<sup>1</sup> Early local histories provide colorful anecdotes about the Stone and Mabee settlers. The earliest source literature for the Mabees consist mainly of folklore and a family Bible.<sup>2</sup> A more detailed history of the Stones can be constructed from a wealth of written reminiscences, public records, news articles and local histories published in the mid-1800s. Most recently the Monroe County Historian published a valuable local history entitled Northfield on the Genesee which includes references to both the Stones and Mabees drawing on all of the above sources. It contains many transcripts of historical civil records. Unfortunately its family records do not provide source citations to distinguish factual genealogy from folklore.<sup>3</sup>*

The Landmark Society provided the author with two unpublished documents: (1) a photocopy of an anonymous set of Bible records for the Stone and West families<sup>4</sup> and (2) a manuscript written by Jackson Alward after 1907 giving the ancestry of Belle Cameron Coleman, great granddaughter of Orringh and Elizabeth.<sup>5</sup> (The Bible records appear to be copied in one hand from other sources except for the last entries. The Alward manuscript contains no citations for data on specific individuals.) This report attempts to authenticate the origins of Orringh and (Liesje) Elizabeth Mabee Stone, to identify three generations of descendants and to document their lives.

- 1 The referenced society is now called the "Landmark Society of Western New York," (LSWNY), 130 Spring Street, Rochester, NY 14608 [as of 2000]. Property now known as stone-Tolan House, to acknowledge the previous owners, the Tolans, who purchased it from the Stones.
- 2 German Bible of Jacobus Mabee [hereinafter Mabee Bible]. Bible, formerly in possession of Margaret MacNab, was given in 1998 to Maude Frank, Town Historian, Penfield, NY.
- 3 Margaret Schmitt MacNab, Katherine Wilcox Thompson, and Shirley Cox Husted, Northfield on the Genesee (Rochester NY: Monroe Co. Historian. 1981) [hereinafter Mac Nab, Northfield]. Images from Mabee Bible, above, are reproduced on p. 227.
- 4 West-Stone Bible Records, (birth, marriage, death, 1735-1889) Landmark Society of Western New York [hereinafter West Stone Family Bible] Source consists of eight photocopied pages of anonymous handwritten vital records donated to Stone-Tolan House family file, LSWNY (See Appendix C, this report). The author believes they consist of transcriptions of records of the families of Pelatiah West, Daniel West, and Orringh Stone, with a few primary records of the later families of Orson West and Henry Knickerbocker.

PREAMBLE

Orringh Stone Meets Liesje Mabee

A wayfaring Dutchman enters a rustic tavern at the edge of the Genesee wilderness in 1792. The robust young proprietor asks the visitor his name--and if he has a marriageable daughter? The Dutchman replies. "Mabee..."

Like generations of pioneer farmers before him, Orringh Stone counted on raising many sons—a necessity at the frontier where a man had to tame the land, clear forests and defend against overwhelming natural and unnatural forces. Courtship might be thought of as an insupportable luxury so Orringh married the Dutchman's daughter, Leisje Mabee, without delay.<sup>[6]</sup>

Orringh, the son of a pioneer, who was a son of a pioneer, who was a son of a pioneer, and so on, did his best to perpetuate the family name.<sup>[7]</sup> Leisje bore nine children and died shortly after delivering the last, a boy who lived only a few months. Of the surviving eight children, only two were male--and one of those died young without issue. According to historians the other son disappeared into the Gold Rush of '49. They conclude:

"With Orringh's death on April 2, 1839, his branch of the Stone name was extinct in Brighton."<sup>[8]</sup>

A sad ending--made even more poignant by recent findings. Orringh's son Enos, the 49er, actually survived and returned to Brighton in old age and died there. He left no children--only a sparse list of chattels as his legacy:

"...gold watch and chain, 2 chairs, old trunk, 2 razors/strop, hand bag, mattress, pillow, old underwear, hose, photographs, memorandum books, two suits old clothing considerably worn and soiled, two pairs old pants, and one old overcoat, discolored by salt water..."<sup>[9]</sup>

So ends the male line of Orringh Stone--but not the female...

Northfield

In the spring of 1790, Judge Enos Stone an investor from Lenox, Massachusetts came to the Genesee Valley wilderness where he had just purchased some frontier land.<sup>[10]</sup> His party drove oxen, cows, hogs and a few sheep past Utica to Lake Cayuga and then loaded their stock in two Durham Boats and continued by water for another treacherous four days. Satisfied at having stocked his land, Judge Stone returned to Lenox and persuaded his eldest son, Orringh, to follow his route west, take up the land and farm it<sup>[11]</sup>

Orringh did so the following spring and built himself a cabin on an Indian trail next to an imposing rock--a rock he later learned was a 'council rock' of the Seneca.<sup>[12]</sup> Orringh had been hard at work many months hacking out a little clearing in the dense woods--a little patch of sunshine to grow some crops and pasture his father's stock--most of which had already gone wild and escaped into the forests. He was alone in the wilderness except for an occasional visit by a Seneca or a rare visit from his brother. Once his brother brought Joseph Brant, the great Iroquois warrior chief, to his cabin.<sup>[13]</sup>

Then one day he saw a small party coming toward him, pulling a boat on wheels down the Indian path from the landing on Irondequoit Bay. Orringh provided shelter as was his custom. His cabin being the only habitable place around, was called, optimistically, a tavern. His guests were the aforesaid Dutchman, Jacobus Maybee from the Mohawk Valley, and some investors from Vermont.<sup>[14]</sup>

Orringh referred to Liesje by the English equivalent, “Elizabeth”—“Betsy” for short. She bore her first child, a daughter Sally, in 1795.<sup>[15]</sup>

The Stones led a life of contrasts--hard work and hospitality. While they cleared and cultivated land, they entertained celebrities in the tavern: Aaron Burr in 1795 and in 1797 Louis Phillipe (King of France in 1830).<sup>[16]</sup> Betsy bore three more daughters, Olive, Malana and Elizabeth by 1804, while Orringh took a leadership role in the growing settlement. In 1805 he obtained $50 from a neighboring town and the help of four other men to dig a road four miles long and two rods wide from his farm to the river. He was rewarded with the office of Highway Commissioner.<sup>[17]</sup> In 1806 Betsy bore yet another daughter, Harriet. Then finally in the summer of 1808 she bore a son, Orringh Jr., followed by yet another son, Enos, in 1810.

During the War of 1812 the British Fleet on Lake Ontario harassed the Genesee settlements. To defend their property, Orringh's cousin, Isaac W. Stone, recruited and led a corps of volunteers, including Orringh (who served as a Colonel). The impromptu troops made an audacious, if artificial, show of force. The British Fleet, tricked by the ruse, retreated!<sup>[18]</sup>

Betsy Mabee Stone died in 1813. Orringh remarried within six months. Betsy's infant son died three days after Orringh's second marriage.<sup>[19]</sup>

Orringh's second wife, Sally West, produced two more daughters, Caroline and Eliza. By then the Stone's log cabin had been transformed into a modest two-story frame dwelling in the Federal Style. It continued to serve as tavern and prominent meeting place. The Town of Brighton formed at the Stone Tavern in 1814 as did the Brighton Presbyterian Church in 1817. Sally passed away in 1819. Orringh married a third time but had no more children. Orringh's eldest daughters had already reached adulthood and had married. Brighton was soon eclipsed by the emerging city of Rochester. The city attracted more celebrities--in 1825 General Lafayette visited the Stone's Tavern.<sup>[20]</sup> Orringh entered his mature years with a legacy of accomplishment.

Tragedy struck one spring night in 1834 when Orringh's 26-year-old son, Orringh Jr., fell from the steamship Michigan on Lake Erie. It was weeks before his body washed ashore. During that time many feared he had been murdered. When the corpse was finally found at a place appropriately named, "Chagrin," Ohio, the young man's personal belongings and papers were found with him. This convinced Orringh and the authorities that Orringh Jr., had drowned by accident. He was buried in Brighton Cemetery with his mother and infant brother.<sup>[21]</sup>

Northwest Migration

As early as 1825 pioneer settlers from the East had begun to infiltrate the southwest part of Michigan Territory. A road led through an outpost called, Niles and to the east shore of Lake Michigan. Soon a railroad reached Niles--as did Orringh's only remaining son, Enos.<sup>[22]</sup>

More settlers began to appear in Michigan in 1830, many having been granted patents to public land under legislation passed in 1824. A land rush in 1832 brought throngs of settlers including at least three of Orringh's daughters--Caroline, Malana and Olive. The pressure on the land and its native population threatened to spread the Blackhawk War into the Michigan settlements. Simultaneously a cholera epidemic swept the region and Orringh lost an infant grandson to it. Orringh's daughters survived all this and stayed on at the frontier. The only child to remain at home in Brighton was Harriet.

The Panic of 1837 resulted in widespread economic hardship in New York. Orringh Stone's estate and farm remained intact, but his family scattered. Orringh Stone died in 1839. The depression may have especially hurt Orringh's eldest daughter, Sally, and her husband. In his will Orringh cautions that none of Sally's inheritance was to be subject to the contract debts or liabilities of her husband, Enoch Hibbard.<sup>[23]</sup>

Enos Stone was the first of Orringh's children to give up his interest in the Brighton farm. The daughters began to sell off Orringh's land in the 1840s. In the end, only Harriet kept what remained of the farm, buying out the rest of the heirs.<sup>[24]</sup> She had recently married, but her husband died young and left Harriet to work the farm as best she could. Eventually she sold it to a family named "Tolan".<sup>[25]</sup> It is now on the Tour of Historic Homes, Rochester, New York, owned and managed by the Landmark Society of Western New York (LSWNY).<sup>[26]</sup>

age 26<sup>43</sup> when he fell from the Steamboat "Michigan" and drowned in Lake Erie near Conneaut, Ohio.<sup>44</sup>

Enos Stone began his western migration in the 1830s at Niles, Michigan.<sup>52</sup> By age forty, he had reached the California gold fields and set up a mercantile in infamous Aguas Frias, Mariposa County.<sup>53</sup> Ruthless miners cruelly exploited local natives until they rebelled and took out their rage on the merchants.<sup>54</sup> Enos' neighbor, Senator William Miller, pleaded for Federal aid before the State Senate and as a result the Governor secured a batallion of troops to put down the uprising.<sup>55</sup> Enos left town shortly after this 'Mariposa War'--also after losing a civil lawsuit.<sup>56</sup>

By 1853 he had found his way to Galveston, Texas where he married Sally. He settled into a life of farming and dentistry.<sup>57</sup> After his wife died in Galveston, Enos returned to his birthplace and lived his final years with his sister Harriet Stone Hagaman in Rochester. The probate of his estate indicates no children but many heirs through his sisters, few assets and the mementos mentioned earlier.<sup>58</sup>

Second Generation

Enoch and Sally left Brighton after 1820 and moved east possibly to be near Enoch's family still living in Pompey, Onandaga County, New York.<sup>72</sup> In 1840 Enoch and Sally were living in the railroad village of Fulton, town of Volney, Oswego Co. New York.<sup>73</sup> By 1850 they had gone west to Joliet, Illinois.<sup>74</sup> Enoch became a lawyer and invested in Michigan and Illinois land.<sup>75</sup> By 1855 they had moved to Waukegan, Illinois on Lake Michigan where they joined distantly related kinsman, Truman Hibbard, a lighthouse keeper on the Lake.<sup>76</sup> Two of their daughters married in Waukegan and their son, William, died in there in 1855.<sup>77</sup> Two sons-in-law, Andrew Cady and Robert C. Van Rensselaer, invested in Wisconsin land and moved there in the 1860s. Enoch and Sally also moved to Wisconsin in 1860 and settled at Sevastopol on the peninsula of land between Green Bay and Lake Michigan.<sup>78</sup> They next followed their eldest son, Charles, to the mountains of southeastern Missouri where Sally died before 1870. After Sally's death, daughter, Julia, kept house for Enoch at Farmington, Missouri.<sup>79</sup> Ten years later, Enoch removed to Whitehall in western Wisconsin.<sup>80</sup> Enoch, called "Judge Hibbard", died there three months short of his ninetieth birthday.

Sally Stone and Enoch Hibbard had the following children:

12. i. CHARLES HENRY<sup>3</sup> HIBBARD was born in Brighton 2 April 1816.<sup>81</sup> Charles died 14 November 1872 in Lawson, Ray Co., Missouri, at age 56.<sup>82</sup> He married MARIE JANE OSBORN 5 October 1843.<sup>83</sup> Marie was born 28 August 1821 in Ohio<sup>84</sup> and died 25 April 1907 at Waverly, Bremer Co., Iowa.<sup>85</sup> Charles Henry Hibbard left New York to settle in Marengo, Illinois before 1840. He took out patents to a large quantity of public lands in Wisconsin and Illinois.<sup>86</sup> In 1850 two of his children succumbed to scarlet fever. After his surviving children reached adulthood he resettled first to southeastern Missouri<sup>87</sup> and then to Lawson, Missouri where he died.<sup>88</sup> His wife survived him more than thirty years and is buried next to his sister Sarah Hibbard Cady in Waverly, Iowa.
13. ii. ELIZABETH HIBBARD was born in Brighton about 1817.<sup>89</sup> Elizabeth died after 1890 probably in Rochester, NY, her last known residence. She married WILLIAM B. HARRIS before 1844.<sup>90</sup> William was born 4 April 1812 in Liverpool, New York;<sup>91</sup> died 12 November 1866 at 54 years 7 months, 14 days and is buried at Salina, Onondaga Co., New York.<sup>92</sup>
14. iii. ALEXANDER BOARDMAN HIBBARD, born in Brighton about 1819;<sup>93</sup> died in California about 1855; unmarried.<sup>94</sup> Family folklore claims a maniac shot and killed Alexander.<sup>95</sup> He may have gone to the Gold Rusj in '49 and struck it rich.<sup>96</sup>

about 69.<sup>117</sup> Andrew Cady patented land in Wisconsin<sup>118</sup> and settled at Green Bay, Brown Co., Wisconsin.<sup>119</sup> He fought in the Civil War, enlisting in April 1861 as 1st Lt. in Co. G, Third Wisconsin Infantry Volunteers.<sup>120</sup> He served under Capt. E.L. Hubbard, Neenah Guards which mustered 29 June, 1861 and went to Hagerstown, Maryland. Andrew served until 7 November 1861 when he was honorably discharged at Muddy Bridge Camp.<sup>121</sup> According to Andrew's military service records he re-enlisted 21 August, 1862, enrolling in Co. F., Wisconsin 32nd Infantry, serving first as private and then sergeant. He was detailed as a clerk at Memphis under Maj. Gen. Sherman. In the winter of 1862-63 there was some error noted in his records and it was further noted that he was released from military prison 16 June 1864 and ordered to report for duty at Memphis. He was officially reported as a deserter 1 July 1864. Andrew denied the whole episode in his pension application, saying he had never re-enlisted. Andrew died while his application was pending.

Sarah made a subsequent widow's application for the pension, and stated that Andrew had indeed re-enlisted as a commissary sergeant in October, 1862 serving until 1864. It appears that the Pension Office denied her pension based on Andrew's alleged desertion.

After Andrew's death Sarah moved with her sister Julia Hibbard to Long Beach California and by 1900 the two sisters were living at the Widow's Relief Corp. Home, in Evergreen, a suburb of San Jose, California. Seven years later Sarah died and was buried next to her sister-in-law Jane Marie Osborne in Waverly, Iowa. Sarah and Andrew had no children.

Olive and Orson left Brighton after 1830 and settled at Albion with their four boys. An infant son, Enos, died in 1832 possibly the victim of the cholera epidemic that struck Calhoun County in June of that year.<sup>129</sup> Their daughter Caroline was born in Albion in 1834. They sold their interest in the Orringh Stone's Brighton farm in 1844.<sup>130</sup> Orson patented 480 acres of farmland in Albion.<sup>131</sup> Together with their children they farmed adjacent parcels in Albion.<sup>132</sup> In 1849 sons George and Addison joined the Gold Rush. Addison died in California but George returned to the Albion farm.<sup>133</sup> A year before his death Orson sold his land, some to his son, George, who took over the farm.<sup>134</sup> Orson and Olive then followed their son Frederick to Des Moines, Iowa.<sup>135</sup> Orson died in 1869 shortly after arriving. He is buried in the West Family Plot in Woodland Cemetery, Des Moines.<sup>136</sup> Olive and her son Nelson continued to live in Des Moines, on the farm of her son Frederick.

Olive Stone and Orson West had the following children:

20. i. FREDERICK ALVAH<sup>3</sup> WEST was born in Brighton 9 December 1818.<sup>137</sup> Frederick died 9 August 1891 in Des Moines, Polk Co., Iowa, at age 72.<sup>138</sup> He married twice, first 23 June 1842, Calhoun Co., Michigan, RUTH ANN MCCRARY.<sup>139</sup> He married second 30 June 1847, Bellevue, Michigan, LYDIA HAYNES CORLISS<sup>140</sup> who was born 9 September 1826 in Easton, Washington Co., New York. She was the daughter of Mitchell Corliss and Mary Taft.<sup>141</sup> Lydia died 1 May 1900 in Des Moines at age 73.<sup>142</sup>

1828, New York.<sup>146</sup> George and his brother, Addison, joined "The Albion Company," a wagon party bound for California in 1849. Though stranded for a week when the Steamer, Dahcota, was wrecked crossing the Missouri River, they restarted from Kanessville, Iowa May 2 1849.<sup>147</sup> George (32 years old) joined the mining camps at Kelsey in El Dorado County.<sup>148</sup>

George returned to Albion and married. He provided a home not only for his wife but her two-year-old son, and female relation, Polly Stone. The following year when George's sister, Caroline, died, her husband, Henry Knickerbocker, also moved in with George.<sup>149</sup> As early as 1868 George began selling off parcels of the farm acquired from his father.<sup>150</sup> Eventually he left Michigan for New Jersey and is last shown with his brother, Nelson, in Pascack, (Bergen Co. ) New Jersey in 1890.<sup>151</sup>

4. Malana<sup>2</sup> Stone (Orringh<sup>1</sup>) was born in Brighton 12 December 1800.<sup>165</sup> Malana died 19 March 1847 in Newton, Calhoun Co., Michigan, at age 46.<sup>166</sup> She married Granville Beardsley 10 July 1823 in Brighton.<sup>167</sup> Granville/Greenville was born 29 August 1798 in Scipio, Cayuga Co., New York.<sup>168</sup> He was the son of Agur Beardsley and Abigail Downs. Granville married second, Charlotte Lawton in 1851 and had four more children: Greenville, Jr, Frank Josiah, Lottie, and Nelson.<sup>169</sup> Granville died 11 November 1867 in Battle Creek, Calhoun Co., Michigan, at age 69.<sup>170</sup> Family legend states he was bound out to service at ten years of age when his father died in Scipio in 1808. Granville supposedly taught carpentry at the Auburn State Prison. Apparently he had discharged his obligation and left by the time he was fifteen in 1813.<sup>171</sup> He married Malana Stone ten years later in Brighton.

Malana may have been the first of Orringh and Elizabeth Stone's daughters to go west. She and Granville were said to be the first settlers in Newton, (later Calhoun County), a place that would become famous for its orchards. They took up patents to 400 acres in Sections 1 and 12.<sup>172</sup> Malana died sixteen years later, having born three children.<sup>173</sup> Granville remarried four years later and raised a second family.<sup>174</sup>

Malana Stone and Granville Beardsley had the following children:

26. i. ELIZABETH<sup>3</sup> BEARDSLEY was born in Brighton 28 July 1824.<sup>175</sup> She died after 1890.<sup>176</sup> She married 5 December 1844 in Marshall, Calhoun Co., Michigan, JOHN JARVIS LOWELL.<sup>177</sup> John was born 21 July 1817 in Piermont, New Hampshire. He was the son of Benjamin Lowell.<sup>178</sup> John died 18 February, 1905 at age 87.<sup>179</sup> John and Elizabeth's first children were born in Michigan. According to tradition they joined a wagon party to California 28 March 1852.<sup>180</sup>

Their destination suggests they followed the Carson emigrant route over the Sierra Nevada south of Lake Bigler (now Tahoe) into California and probably arrived in the fall of that year. It is said they settled at Diamond Springs, El Dorado County.<sup>181</sup> When first settled in 1850 it was a popular stopping place on the emigrant road and noted for good mines, water and pasture. The gold yield at Diamond Springs peaked in 1854, the year the Lowell's daughter, Caroline, was born. They left California that summer, boarding a steamer in San Francisco bound for the Isthmus of Panama. John Lowell is quoted as saying:

"My wife rode a mule and carried the baby Carrie, 3 months old in front of her. I took Charlie 5 years old on my mule and carried my trunk on a mule, halfway across the Isthmus for 20 miles, and then we took the cars."<sup>182</sup>

Arriving at New York by ship, they returned to Michigan where six years later another son, Elmer, was born in Ceresco, Calhoun County.<sup>183</sup> They remained in Michigan another fifteen years. By 1870, according to the Census, they had migrated to Des Moines.<sup>184</sup> They were accompanied by their married daughter, Harriet Lowell Henry, and her family, and perhaps by Elizabeth's cousin, Frederick West and his parents Orson and Olive Stone West.

John Lowell was a butcher in Des Moines and had $12,000 in assets. John and Elizabeth lived with their daughter Harriet and family in a prosperous district.<sup>185</sup> John is said to have later traveled in Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, and Washington.<sup>186</sup> Elizabeth and John are found living in Portland in 1895.<sup>187</sup> No death or burial records have been found for either in Portland, Omaha or Des Moines.

died June 30, 1866 in Warsaw, Kosciusko Co., Indiana, at about 62 years.<sup>198</sup> Bronson and Elizabeth Hatch moved to Indiana at least by 1840. They raised two daughters and farmed near the community of Mishawaka in northern Indiana near the Michigan border,<sup>199</sup> about 10 miles from Elizabeth's brother Enos in Niles, Michigan. Not far from the Hatch farm lived a family named Hudson who had a son named George.<sup>200</sup> The relationship between the Hatches and Hudsons is not clear, but Elizabeth's niece, Francis Hagaman of New York, married George Hudson.

In the 1860's Elizabeth's daughters both married men named Card. Bronson and Elizabeth then sold their Mishawaka farm and moved to Warsaw some 40 miles to the southeast. Bronson died soon after in 1866 of pulmonary consumption at age 61. Elizabeth moved in with her daughter and son-in-law, Rosetta and Varnum Card and their 4-year-old daughter, Maud. The widow, Elizabeth Stone Hatch, opened a prosperous hardware business--she had $11,000 in assets. Her son-in-law, Varnum, clerked in her store. Her daughter Harriet and son-in-law Charles Card lived two doors away where Charles clerked in a stove store.<sup>201</sup> Four years later Elizabeth herself became ill. She lingered six years before she passed away in 1880 at age 77.

Elizabeth Stone and Bronson Hatch had the following children born near Mishawaka, IN:

29. i. ROSETTA E.<sup>3</sup> HATCH was born in Mishawaka, St. Joseph Co., Indiana 30 November 1837.<sup>202</sup> She died after 1890 probably in Warsaw, Indiana.<sup>203</sup> She married VARNUM J. CARD 3 September 1862 in Mishawaka.<sup>204</sup> Varnum was born about 1841 in Ohio.<sup>205</sup> Varnum died 30 May 1890.<sup>206</sup>
30. ii. HARRIET L. HATCH, was born 1 August 1840 in Mishawaka.<sup>207</sup> She died 14 February 1900 Chicago, Illinois at age 59.<sup>208</sup> She married 26 March 1862, Mishawaka, CHARLES W. CARD,<sup>209</sup> born about 1838, Ohio.<sup>210</sup>

Harriet Stone and Charles Hagaman had the following children born in Brighton:

32. ii. MARIA HAGAMAN, was born 16 May 1837 in Brighton<sup>225</sup> and died 14 May 1912 at Florence, Italy, unmarried.<sup>226</sup> Upon the death of her uncle, Enos Stone, in 1889 Maria presented a claim against the estate in the amount of $2748 for services. The claim was disputed. In the final accounting $1150 was allowed to Maria and paid 30 May 1890. The details of the claim and dispute are not known. Her sister Jennie served as executor. Maria was travelling in Italy in 1912 when she died suddenly. She was buried in the family plot at Mt. Hope Cemetery, Rochester.<sup>227</sup>
33. iii. FRANCES HAGAMAN was born in Brighton, Monroe Co., New York 30 April 1838.<sup>228</sup> Frances died 3 Aug. 3, 1887 at age 49 in Toledo, Ohio.<sup>229</sup> She married
